

Sherlocked

Event Description:

Sherlocked is an investigative journalism event which focuses on both its components. It's not simply about writing the best articles or solving the mystery: it's about depicting the scenario in an unbiased manner. Multiple suspects, various evidence, conflicting reports, competing journalists, live action press conference and guaranteed fun.

Prize Money: 7,000 (Total)

Event Rules:

1. Participants may form groups of up to two members.
2. The event will start with a presentation of the case by the police in the press conference room, followed by opportunities to ask the suspects questions, in person. The event will also be punctuated with periodic press releases.
3. Participants must, at the end of the time allotted for questioning, write a report detailing the most probably chain of events that led to the crime.
4. Entries will not be judged on writing skill or grammar, but rather on how coherent the plot is and how well connected their explanation of the sequence of events preceding the crime is.
5. The winning entry need not be the one that presents the right answer, as long as it is logical and explains all the events that took place.
